

Gabon's inland and coastal forests are so vast, they sequester more carbon dioxide each year than the amount produced by 30 million cars, helping the world stave off climate change through ...

Gabon is considered a global leader in climate action--probably the most carbon-positive country in the world due to its strong environmental conservation and longstanding political ...

Based on primary data collected from 508 individuals in six provinces of Gabon, this study aims to identify state interventions that promote or hinder environmental sustainability.

This law defines the principles and means of environmental protection in Gabon, including the preservation and sustainable use of natural resources, pollution control, environmental education, ...

Gabon is prioritizing sustainable management of resources through a range of initiatives that strike a balance between conservation and development. By implementing sustainable ...

Gabon is part of the High Ambition Coalition for Nature and People and is committed to protecting and conserving 30 percent of the world's land and ocean by 2030 (often referred to as 30×30). Gabon, ...

Gabon is green--over 88 percent of its land is forest. Thirteen national parks guard an 11 percent chunk of it. But protecting nature isn't just about drawing lines on a map. It's about the ...

Learn about Gabon's National Climate Action Plans, community involvement, and investment strategies aimed at fostering environmental sustainability and resilience.

Through its second NDC, Gabon unconditionally commits to remaining a carbon-neutral country up to and beyond 2050. With international support, the country pledges to continue to act as a "net carbon ...

This article explores the rapid loss of Gabon's rainforest treasure, analyzing the socio-economic and environmental factors contributing to deforestation, the role of intergovernmental ...

Web: <https://www.scmindustries.co.za>