

Uzbekistan is set to launch five new thermal power plants (TPPs) by the end of 2027, as part of agreements signed with foreign companies to address the country's growing energy needs.

The Head of State was briefed on measures to ensure the stability of the energy system in Tashkent. The capital continues to experience population growth and active construction. Over the ...

Numerous physicists, environmentalists, energy experts, political scientists and public activists have raised their voices against the NPP. In particular, according to estimates, it will be more expensive to ...

Yet, both Uzbekistan and Kazakhstan remain wary of such an arrangement, with Astana voicing concerns regarding the independence of its energy industry and Tashkent opting instead to ...

The President Shavkat Mirziyoyev addressed ceremony of commissioning of power facilities and launching other power projects entitled Powering the Future: Sustainable Energy For ...

Uzbekistan has signed key agreements with Chinese partners to boost renewable energy, including plans for a 100 MW electricity storage system in Tashkent and a 500 MW wind power project in ...

Year after year, citizens across Uzbekistan face recurring power outages that disrupt daily life, strain household routines, and trigger growing public frustration.

Uzbekistan Energy Minister Zhurabek Mirzamakhmudov has spoken out in an effort to ease growing concerns over the country losing its energy independence after signing an agreement ...

Uzbekistan has set ambitious goals for renewable energy production, aiming to generate 25 percent of its electricity from renewable sources by 2030.

In late May, Tajikistan's government yet again announced that the country's energy system would reconnect to the Central Asian Integrated Power System (IPS or CAPS), a network allowing ...

Web: <https://www.scmindustries.co.za>